Dear Ehud,

I hope this note finds you well, and that you had a meaningful holiday season with friends and family. I wish you a happy, healthy 5776.

I wanted to follow-up on my note from August regarding the op-ed you are considering writing for the Genesis Prize Foundation, jointly with myself. Our staff would be happy to incorporate your feedback on the suggested points and begin drafting an article for your approval, assuming you are still able to support this effort.

Also, I am going to be in Israel for about 10 days starting this Friday and look forward to seeing you.

Best regards,

Stan

Dear Ehud (if I may):

Thank you for your prompt reply and for your very kind words. Your support means a lot to Michael and me!

I will share with you some bullet points for an OpEd and, if you feel comfortable, I will ask our communications team to draft the article for our mutual review.

Please let me know next time you are in NYC and I will be happy to get together. I also plan to be in Israel for the meeting of the selection committee of the Genesis Prize in the second half of October and we could try to meet then as well.

With warm regards,

Stan

Dear Alexandra
Pl convey to Stan:

I'm deeply impressed by the quality, richness and depth of the work you're doing through and around the Genesis Prize.
It is immensely important and timely.
Your personal and collective devotion to the REAL challenges of Judaism today are both inspiring and moving.
I'm extremely busy these days and all along the coming year, but ready to make an effort to contribute.
Send me a draft of the op-Ed and I'll tell you whether you can sign me in.
I'll be glad to meet you and Misha and/or Roman and discuss what else is to be done. I'm in NY every few weeks, so we can meet there.
Keep holding the torch high and burning. It is a great Mitzvah

Warm regards
Ehud Barak
